Dr. Robert Stainforth, Physical Scientist, National Radon Lab (NRL), Radiation Protection Bureau, Health Canada

Dr. Robert Stainforth is a physical scientist at the National Radon Lab (NRL), Radiation Protection Bureau, Health Canada. Robert has a background in experimental particle physics with a focus on characterising radon background signals. Since joining Health Canada in 2019 Dr. Stainforth has performed research to estimate doses to the lung from radon and conducted surveys assessing radon levels in buildings across Canada. As the current Co-Chair of the Canadian General Standards Board (CGSB) committee on radon, and with input from industry professionals, his current focus is updating CGSB standards 149.11 and 149.12 for radon control options in new and existing buildings.
